How to use Google Classroom

Google Classroom is an easy to use online tool that allows teachers to send information to students in their classes.

Your daughter has a Google Classroom "class" for all of the subjects on their timetable. By logging in to either the Google Classroom website in a web browser or by using the Google Classroom app (Google Play, App Store) on their phone/tablet, they can see all of the "announcements" (messages) and "assignments" (homework) that their teachers have sent them. Why not ask your daughter to show you Google Classroom from their account, so you can better understand what they experience when they use it?

There are two ways to join a 'class'. This is where all the information will be stored for your daughter to interact with from her subject teacher. She can:
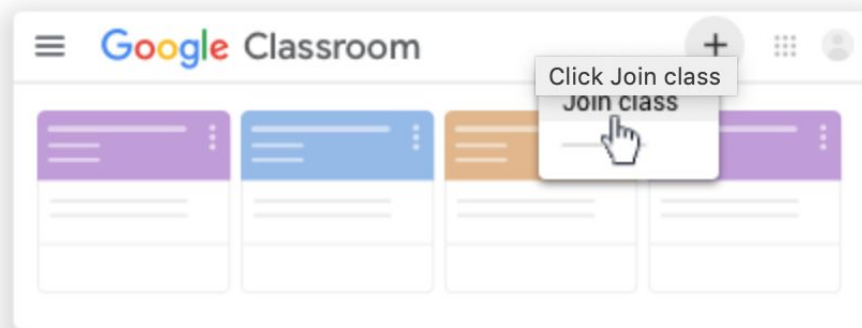

- Join a class with a class code—If her teacher gives her a class code, use this code to add herself to the class. Her teacher might give her the code while she's in class or email it to her.
- Accept an invitation from her teacher—If her teacher sends her an invitation, she'll see Join on the class card on her Classroom homepage.
